

Digital Natives and Digital Immigrants

Read the following article. Pay special attention to the words in bold.  2.3

They're everywhere: in coffee shops, on the train, in restaurants, at work. They're texting; they're tweeting; they're googling; they're checking social media; they're taking selfies; they're listening to music. And yes, they're even working. They're always connected. These are the "digital natives."

Born at the end of the twentieth century and the beginning of the twenty-first century, digital natives don't know life without technology. The first generation of digital natives is now entering the workforce and changing the way we work. More and more younger people are working from home, in coffee shops, or anywhere. They're bringing their personal equipment into the workplace, too. They switch back and forth between their social and professional lives. They don't see the need to separate the two.

Some older people are adapting well to technology. Some people call them "digital immigrants." Others are having trouble. Some are refusing to use any new technology. Older people often think that technology is growing too fast. Look at the older people around you. Do they have smart phones? Do they have earbuds in their ears? Are they texting? Many older people prefer to share information with a small group of friends. Digital natives share information globally<sup>1</sup>.

The younger generations want high-tech devices that do everything: take pictures, send texts and photos, provide music and videos, and connect them with friends around the world. What does the older generation want from technology? In many cases, Grandma and Grandpa just want a device that connects them to family and friends. They like to see pictures of grandchildren. Some even love to have a video chat with family.

As more and more technology is entering every aspect of our lives, the digital divide between generations is widening.

<sup>1</sup> globally: throughout the world

COMPREHENSION Based on the reading, write T for true or F for false.

1. _____ Many digital natives are always connected.
2. _____ Digital natives separate their personal and professional lives.
3. _____ Digital immigrants usually want a device that does many things.

THINK ABOUT IT Discuss the questions with a partner or in a small group.

1. Do you think being connected all the time is positive or negative? Explain.
2. Do you agree that the digital divide between generations is widening? Or are digital immigrants starting to catch up with digital natives? Explain with examples.

2.4 Contrasting the Simple Present and the Present Continuous

Form

THE SIMPLE PRESENT	THE PRESENT CONTINUOUS
Grandma uses email. She doesn't use a smart phone. Does she use the Internet? Yes, she does . When does she use the Internet? Why doesn't she use a smart phone?	Marc is sending a message. He isn't making a phone call. Is he sending a message to his friend? Yes, he is . How is he sending a message? Why isn't he sending a message to his friend?

Use

EXAMPLES	EXPLANATION
People use their phones to text. I sometimes send photos to my grandmother. Older people prefer to talk on the phone.	We use the simple present for: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• a general truth.</li><li>• a habitual activity.</li><li>• a custom.</li></ul>
I'm getting a text message right now. My grandfather is learning about technology. Technology is growing quickly.	We use the present continuous for: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• an action that is in progress now.</li><li>• a longer action in progress at this general time.</li><li>• a recent trend.</li></ul>
My grandparents live in a retirement home. My sister is living in a dorm this semester.	We use live in the simple present to talk about a person's home. We use live in the present continuous to talk about a temporary, short-term residence.
A: What does she do (for a living)? B: She's an English teacher. A: What is she doing now? B: She's texting her grandson.	"What does she do ?" asks about a job or profession. "What is she doing ?" asks about an activity now.

2.5 Action and Nonaction Verbs

EXAMPLES	EXPLANATION
He is texting his friend. I am listening to music.	Some verbs are action verbs. These verbs express physical or mental activity.
Young people know a lot about technology. Many people have a smart phone now. Do you remember a time without cell phones?	Some verbs are nonaction verbs. These verbs express a state, condition, perception, or feeling, not an action. We do not usually use the present continuous with nonaction verbs. We use the simple present even if we are talking about now.
She's looking at the text message. I want to learn about technology, but it looks hard . Your photo looks like a selfie.	Some verbs can express an action or a perception. When they express an action (for example, look at ), they are action verbs. When they express a perception (for example, look + adjective or look like ), they are nonaction verbs.
I'm looking at my cell phone. I see a text from my father. She is listening to music. She hears her favorite song.	Look and listen are action verbs. See and hear are nonaction verbs.
Grandma is thinking about getting an e-reader. She thinks that technology is a good thing.	When we think about or of something, think is an action verb. When think shows an opinion about something, it is a nonaction verb.
My grandfather is having a hard time with technology. He's having lunch with his friends now. Grandma has free time now. She has five grandchildren. I can't visit her now. I have a cold.	When have means to experience something or to eat or drink something, it is an action verb. When have shows possession, relationship, or illness, it is a nonaction verb.
