Lifts

A lift, also known as an elevator, is a machine used mostly in towers. It is 1..... important device in tall buildings that helps to move goods or people to lower and upper floors with ease.

In the past, before the days of lifts, housing developments weren't allowed to build over seven floors. At that time, rich people lived 2..... the ground floor, and the poorest people would live on the top floor and therefore had to climb the most stairs. In fact, in some 3., a lift is mandatory for housing buildings that are over four floors high.

Lifts help to carry goods and people between floors much faster than going by stairs. For that reason, 4. people see lifts as lifesavers when living in tall buildings. In spite of that, using lifts in some busy buildings might be a terrible experience, particularly as sometimes people have to wait for a long time. The situation can get even worse if there is a power outage, especially if people are in the lift after the door has closed.

However, we all can't deny that lifts make our lives 5. and more comfortable.
