- We won't needing this anymore.
- Wait! What do you use to sop up sauce with?
- I don't eat sauce.

As you know, we getting better with age. And this can be a very exciting chapter we're about to open. In the book of life.

- What did you think I'd be?
- I honestly thought you'd be relieved.
- Relieved? Really?!
- I think relief what you're feeling.

- I know you. You're feeling guilty.
- Yes! I feeling extremely guilty.

- Your chair arrived.
- Oh, my God, they said it . going to take six weeks.
- It took two days. When does that happen?

I'm sorry, I judging by my experience of you, not the real you. That was wrong of me.

- Haven't we had enough news for one day?
- They getting married.

Well, good job picking the worst way imaginable.

You always talking about a door closing or a window closing or opening, something...

What Sol trying to say is...
I'm leaving you.
And he's leaving you...

Mom, I can't stop seeing it.

- So I get to the beach and who do I find doing her yoga noises?
- I'm guessing Frankie.

- What do you think is so important that we had to have dinner tonight?
- I getting something.
- I have a very strong sense that this is the night they announce their retirement.

- I'm heartbroken.
- You crying.

You have no idea what I going through.

Read the conversations and fill in the table

Have you ever wondered if Ben and Jerry make more than ice cream together?

It would have been easier if you'd died.

- Oh, because I'm a tolerant person I deserve to have my life blown apart?
- I didn't say "deserve."
- I'm just saying... it's harder for me.
