E Reading

Read the article about clothes shopping and choose the correct answer for each question.

Think before you shop

by Anna Browne

I like to think of myself as a responsible clothes shopper. I don't buy fast fashion because this kind of clothing only looks good for a short time. Factories make poor quality items quickly and cheaply. Instead, I look for clothes made of good material that stay in fashion for longer. They're a little more expensive, but it's worth it.

I also make clothes myself. I'm not great at it, but I enjoy making new clothes from old ones. I started doing this because it's better for the environment, and now I like having really interesting clothes that you can't get in a store. It's free as well, of course! Once, I made a skirt from some old sheets. I was really happy with it!

I also look for clothes that people are selling online. Of course, most of them are secondhand, not new. Expensive designer clothes can be really cheap, though, when you buy them secondhand. But sometimes, people sell items that are new. There's nothing wrong with them – they just didn't return the items to the stores in time.

When I buy clothes in main street stores, I always do some research first about where the clothes come from. I like to make sure that the employees in clothes factories work in good conditions and receive the right pay for their skills. I also want to know that the factories aren't polluting the environment around them and making it dirty.

Happy shopping!
