James Salter's Days in Film

James Salter was a pilot in the United States Air force. He abandoned the military profesion in 1957 after the publication of his first novel, The Hunters. He is best know as a novelist, but during the sixties and seventies, he worked in film making. Salter made documentaries, wrote text for films, and even was the director of a film called Three, starring Charlotte Rampling and Sam Waterston.

In Passionate Falsehoods, which was adapted from Salter's book Bringing the Days, published in The New Yorker in 1997, Salter tells the story of his life in flim.

Salter's time in the film world is both good and bad. In Rome, he met directors and starts. In New York, he explored the city with Robert Redford and enjoyed being famous. Deborah Tresiman and Michael Agger have talked with Nick Paumgarten about The Last Book that describes Salter's opinion about his film career.

"Of sixteen texts for movies, only four were popular. There was money, attractive women, and entrance into rooms where there were stories more for the dinner table than for the page "Salter though he was wasting his time"

Perhaps he wasted his time in larger artistic way, but it still makes for attractive reading. The last book is available to everyone in online stores.
