ALOR STAR: The ongoing El Nino in Kedah could become the most severe dry spell in the country's history, said a climate expert.

Universiti Utara Malaysia Disaster Management Institute Director, Dr Chong Khai Lin, said weather analysis showed this year's average daily temperature is three degrees Celsius above the norm.

She said while it was still early to tell if the ongoing current dry spell, which typically spans six to 18 months, is the worst in the country's history, the increase in the average temperature was "concerning".

Chong said during the 2016 El Nino, Langkawi went 27 days without rain.
