Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions

The environment has been significantly impacted by human activities. Over the past century, industrialization, deforestation, and pollution have caused serious environmental damage. For example, deforestation has led to the loss of biodiversity, as many species lose their habitats. Additionally, air and water pollution caused by factories and transportation have affected both human health and the ecosystems. Climate change is another consequence of human actions, resulting in extreme weather patterns and rising sea levels.

Fortunately, awareness of environmental issues is growing, and many individuals and organizations are working towards reducing their carbon footprint. Simple actions like recycling, using renewable energy, and conserving water can make a difference. Governments are also starting to implement policies aimed at protecting the environment, such as encouraging the use of electric vehicles and reducing emissions. However, much more needs to be done to ensure the planet remains habitable for future generations.
