The Hen Who Sold Pencils

Once upon a time in a colorful village, there lived a clever _____ named Clara. Clara wasn't an ordinary hen; she loved to draw! Every day, she would grab her favorite _____ and sketch the beautiful flowers and tall trees around her cozy _____.

One sunny morning, Clara had a brilliant idea. "I will _____ my drawings to the _____ in the village!" she thought excitedly. She wanted to save money to rent a bigger coop, where she could have more space for her art.

Clara hopped out of her cozy bed and started drawing. She drew _____ lovely pictures filled with vibrant colors and cheerful scenes. After finishing, she decided to _____ a note to her friends, inviting them to see her artwork.

"Dear Friends," the note read, "Come to the market today to see my beautiful drawings! Love, Clara the Hen."

When her friends, the other hens, heard the news, they couldn't wait to help. They spread the word, and soon the entire village was buzzing with excitement.

At the market, Clara displayed her ten amazing drawings. The men and women came to see what the fuss was all about. "Look at this!" one man said, pointing at a colorful flower. "I will buy it!"

Clara smiled and said, "Thank you! Your support will help me _____ a bigger coop for my art!"

By the end of the day, Clara sold all her drawings. With the money, she was able to rent a beautiful new coop. Clara was happier than ever, surrounded by plenty of space to create more art.

And from that day on, Clara the Hen became the most famous artist in the village, proving that with creativity and determination, anything is possible!

The end.
