Text 1

Once there was an invisible being who lived in a village on the shore of Lake Ontario, America. He lived in a big wigwam with his sister. There were many beautiful wigwams there. One of them was his wigwam which stood out from all the others as it had beautiful pictures painted on the sides. No one living in the village saw or spoke to The Invisible Man. All the women wanted to be his wife. They left no stone unturned but still, they could not marry him.

One day some women came to the invisible wigwam and met his sister. They asked how they could marry The Invisible Man.

'If you want to marry my brother, you should be able to see him'

'What? Do you mean that I have a chance to see him? Tell me what I should do?' asked one of the women.

In the same village lived an ugly girl named The Rough-Face Girl. She lived with her poor father and two sisters. Her mean sisters were the apple of her father's eye. They always made her tend to the fire. She was eventually covered in scars from sparks in the fire. This is where she got the name, Rough-Face Girl.

One day, her sisters said to her father, "Father, we need the most beautiful clothes so we can marry The Invisible Man." Her father stared at them and whispered, 'Beautiful clothes? They are expensive. I can't afford them. Her sisters got angry and forced her father to buy the most beautiful clothes for them.

They said, 'Look on the bright side, Father. If one of us marries The Invisible Man, we'll roll in money. We won't live in this poor house anymore.'

The Invisible's sister was still cooking while they were shaking the bell in front of her wigwam. When she opened the door, she saw two beautiful women in beautiful clothes. She greeted them and asked directly if they knew what her brother looked like. They lied and said yes, but she soon found out that they didn't.

Soon after her sisters left for The Invisible Man's wigwam, the Rough-Face Girl went to her father asking for fine clothes and jewelry because she wanted to marry The Invisible Man, too. Her father told her that he had nothing beautiful left. Then she wore her dress carved with pictures of the sun, moon, stars, plants, trees, and animals. She was off to meet The Invisible Man. As she was walking to see The Invisible Man, people laughed and made fun of her because of her clothes. But she continued walking through the village and reached his wigwam. When she met the sister of The Invisible Man, she was able to answer all questions that the sister had. The Invisible Man and his sister gave her beautiful clothing and told her to bathe in the water. The water cleansed her of her scars and made her beautiful again. She was as pretty as a picture. Finally the two were married and lived happily ever after.
