In a remote _____ in the Andes Mountains, there is a _____ where young boys go on a solitary journey when they turn _____. They are given only a small bag with _____ and a blanket, and sent into the wilderness for three days. This ritual, _____ as El Camino del Cóndor, is meant to test their courage, resilience, and _____ to _____ on their own. The boys must navigate through harsh terrain, face their _____, and reflect on their place in the _____. On the _____ day, as they return to the village, they are greeted by elders who recognize their growth and _____ them into adulthood. The _____ is not just physical but spiritual, marking the boy's passage from childhood to a life of _____ and respect within the community.
