One of the first Hollywood film stars was the British actor Charlie Chaplin. Chaplin was born in London in 1889. He had a very poor and unhappy childhood. He left school when he was very young and worked in several jobs to survive. Then he started to perform in a variety of theatres as a comic actor.

In 1913 he emigrated to America because he wanted to be a film actor. He entered the film industry and invented the character of Charlie the Tramp (Charlot in Italian), a funny short man with a black mustache and a bowler hat. He was brilliant, and the comic character he created is still famous all over the world.

Chaplin made wonderful comedy films like The Golden Rush, City Lights, Modern Times, and The Great Dictator. Almost all these films were silent, that is they didn't have spoken dialogues or a soundtrack, but subtitles helped to tell the story. A pianist sometimes played the piano too – fast music for the exciting parts and slow music for the sad parts.

By 1919 Chaplin was rich and he started the United Artists Studios with some other famous Hollywood stars. He lived in the USA for many years, but the government didn't like his political opinions as they thought he was a socialist. So, in 1952, when Chaplin tried to return to the USA after a journey to London, the Americans did not allow him back. Then Chaplin decided to live in Switzerland until he died in 1977. He returned to the US only once in 1972 when he received a special Oscar for his life's work. This was Hollywood's way of saying sorry to one of its greatest stars.
