

Noisy Neighbours

tenants chalked it up evicted cranked up pound in the act

I lived in a small apartment and some _____ next door always _____ their music to 11. Like loud, loud. And until something like 7am. Maybe later, but that's when I would leave for work. It was like trying to sleep at a festival. My neighbours and I would _____ on their door but they would never open. Then at some point I found out they often left for a bar across the street but would just leave the music on, so I would pull the breaker for their apartment, but they would just come back at 5am and turn it back on. It was reported by heaps of people, but nothing was ever done, so at some point I would jam their lock when they went out so their keys wouldn't work anymore and they had to get the property manager in while the music was blasting inside. After a couple of times of that happening, they were _____. Maybe I'm the bad neighbour in this story...

Caught red-handed

My neighbour came into my back yard when she thought we (university students) had gone home for the summer. I still lived in the house. In fact, I was sitting by the window when she entered our back yard. I thought nothing of it - I _____ to her looking for her cat. I went back to reading my book and completely forgot about her until I saw movement out of the corner of my eye some while later. She was walking out of our backyard with all our plants! I caught her _____ of stealing our garden! I was so astounded that I just sat there and stared at her. I never even tried to stop her