I have a collection of squishy toys, but my favorite is the panda bun. It is round like a bun, with black eyes, a nose, a mouth, and ears. There is a little red bow on its right ear.

You just squeeze the panda to play with it. It is very soft and smells good too. What I like most about my panda bun is that it is a super-slow rising squishy. It takes about four minutes before turning back to its shape after being squeezed. The longest rising record of my panda bun is broken by my carrot-shaped one, which is about five minutes. However, my panda bun is cuter than the carrot one.

Do you know that squeezing a squishy is good for your health? Based on a recent study, it helps relieve stress.

TEXT 7 (For question 15)

One of my favorite subjects at school is English. It is because my English teacher is a creative person. She makes the class cheerful as well as meaningful. I still remember what she asked us to do as the assignment for a descriptive text. She asked us to talk about and to perform what we were good at.

Some of my friends described their ability in doing household chores like cooking, cleaning up, even washing cars or motorcycles! Some others talked about their ability in playing chess, playing online games, making handicrafts, and painting.

I decided to describe and perform my specialty. It was the Moon Walker dance. First, I told everyone about my ability, such as what it was about and how I learned it. Then, I performed it in front the class. It happened that one of my classmates was good at it, too. Then, we danced together. It was so much fun!
