

Listen and fill the gaps:

How dangerous is your journey to school?
Perhaps you have to walk across a [redacted] or ride your bike in traffic. But in general, your [redacted] is probably safe. For some children, it's very [redacted] ...

1 Banpo Elementary School in China is on a [redacted]
The path to school is very [redacted]
The children have to walk in a line. When they meet somebody, they have to [redacted] the mountain while the person passes. For the parents, it is very worrying. Fortunately, the [redacted] of the school [redacted] with the children every morning.

2 A group of children in Sumatra, Indonesia, have to [redacted] every morning on their way to school. The bridge across the river is [redacted], so about 20 children have to walk across a rope. The rope is ten metres above the water. After that, they [redacted] ten kilometres through the jungle! And of course, at the end of the school day, they have to do the same journey again [redacted]

3 Students in Minh Hoa in Vietnam have to [redacted] on their way to and from school every day. There are [redacted], so the children swim. They put their books and clothes [redacted] so they do not get wet. The bags also help the children to stay safe in the water (the water is 20 metres deep). When they reach the other side, they take their [redacted] out of the bag and [redacted]

4 Near Bogotá, the capital of Colombia, some children have to cross a [redacted] to get to school. At the bottom of the valley is the Rio Negro, a huge river.
There is only one way to cross the valley: on a zip wire. That's a [redacted] 800 metres long and 400 metres above the river. [redacted]. In fact, it only takes about one minute! [redacted] cannot travel across the valley alone, so their brother or sister puts them [redacted]
