

conversation 1:

Person 1: -Hi, how are you?

Person 2:-I have just returned from my grandmother's house, something happened that scared me to death.

Person 1:-What happened?

Person 2:-Well, she started to run as a new pastime. I told her that it wasn't convenient to do that because of her age, and that she'd be risking life and limb if she kept exercising without any professional help. And today, when I went to visit her, I found out that she had fallen while running.

Person 1: -Oh no! Is she better now? She is definitely living on the edge.

Person 2:-Thankfully she is much better now, but i feel that having told her that she was risking her life might have brought her misfortune.

Conversation 2:

A: Hey! you look like you've been through a lot. What happened?

B: Oh, you wouldn't believe it. I had the worst weekend ever. First I sprained my ankle as I slipped on some stairs.

A: Ouch! That sounds painful!. But....What happened to your face?

B: Oh, that was from my boxing class. I got hit on the face, and now I've got swollen lips and as you can see, also a chipped tooth. I didn't even notice it until my jaw started hurting. Turns out I dislocated my jaw in the process.

A: No way! I hope you are taking it easy now.

B: I wish I could. But to top it all off, I've caught a cold too. My nose is completely blocked.

A: Wow, your week is being a disaster. Take care of yourself, ok? Sounds like you need to take a break!

B: yeah! I'm planning on it already!
