

Conversation 1:

A: Hey! Glad to see you, it seems like ages! What's up with you?

B: Hello! I'm running late to a meeting, I brought misfortune upon myself by waking up late, but I would love to chat, want to grab a coffee?

A: Sure, that would be great! However, I must warn you, you are risking life and limb just by chatting, you may arrive late!

B: No worries, I was going to quit tomorrow anyways, I guess it's the same if they fire me.

A: Wow, you're really living life on the edge, that's pretty risky. What if you don't get another job? What's your plan?

B: I'm not going to lie, I'm scared to death. I can't settle in a job, I always get fired because of my issue with commitment, I'm in my 30s and I've never been more than a year in the same job!

A: Oh, sorry to hear. However, you can seek new thrills in other places, get a year off, explore yourself and when you come back, you'll be a whole new person.

B: That's actually a great idea! I need some time off, and that would be the perfect fit, well, I have to run to work, just to tell them that I quit! See you!

Conversation 2:

A- Hi William, Nice to meet you!

B- Hi George...

A- Hey! What happens? Why do you seem so sad?

B- It's my brother, he almost died while climbing a mountain.

A- No! What happened? Did he fall without protection? Is he OK?

B- No. At least he is not dead, but, he is in the hospital with lots of injuries. He sprained his wrist after falling, has a dislocated shoulder, and bruised ribs.

A- I'm sorry to hear that, but as you said at least he is not dead.

B- Yes, but at this rhythm he will end up like that. It is not the first time something like that has happened. Few months ago, he fell from a tree, directly hitting his face, and ended up with swollen lips, and a chipped tooth.
