The RSPCA- Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals	1
	2
We were founded in a London coffee shop in 1824. The men present knew they were creating the world's first animal welfare charity, but they couldn't have imagined the size and shape that the charity would become today. Back then we were the SPCA - Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Royal patronage followed in 1837 and Queen Victoria gave permission to add the royal R in 1840, making us the RSPCA as we're known worldwide today.	3
When we were founded, our focus was working animals, such as 'pit ponies', which were worked down the coal mines. But we've changed with the times. Making the First and Second World Wars we worked to help the millions of animals enlisted to serve alongside British, Commonwealth and Allied forces. And, our work with pets that we're best known for today, only developed with the trend to keep them.	4
We've always been influential in forming and improving animal welfare law. In 1822, two years before we were founded, 'Martin's Act' was passed. It was the very first animal welfare law and it forbade 'the cruel and improper treatment of cattle'.	5
Thirteen years on, in 1835, and 'Pease's Act' consolidated this law. The prohibition of cruelty was extended to dogs and other domestic animals; bear-baiting and cock-fighting was forbidden, it insisted on better standards for slaughter houses. Other successes along the way have included laws for lab animals, the abolition of fur farming in the UK, the ban of fox hunting with dogs and the Animal Welfare Act.	6
The greatest's shift across the times has been in attitude. In the UK we're known as 'a nation of animal lovers' but it wasn't always that way. When we were founded it was a challenge to get the British public to recognise animals as emotional creatures - and not just commodities for food, transport or sport.	7
It's inspiring to think how much more of a difference we can make.	8
