The Story of Bread

Bread is one of the oldest foods in the world. People have been making bread for over 10,000 years! It is a basic food that many people eat every day. Bread comes in different shapes, sizes, and flavors, depending on the country and culture.

In France, baguettes are long and crispy. People often eat them with cheese or jam. In India, naan is a soft flatbread made in a clay oven. It is usually eaten with curry or soup. In Mexico, tortillas are thin and round. They are used to make tacos and burritos.

Bread is made from flour, water, and yeast. Yeast helps the bread rise and become soft. Some bread, like flatbread, does not need yeast. People around the world enjoy bread in many ways, such as toast for breakfast, sandwiches for lunch, or as a side with dinner.

No matter where you are, bread is a symbol of sharing and community. Breaking bread together means coming together as friends or family.
