Olivia:

Well, I once went to London with my dad to spend a weekend there and the hotel room was extremely small. The information we'd got was misleading because on the webpage, the photos of the rooms, they looked a lot bigger. In fact, they were so small that you could just about open the door without hitting the bed. It was really hot because it was the middle of summer and it got really claustrophobic, so my dad complained to the manager, but he didn't even apologise. We thought we deserved our money back and we were really upset.

Sam

The worst holiday I ever had actually happened last summer. I was going to a school trip with my friends and we were going to Barcelona. So while we were on the bus, we realised that we weren't actually going to Barcelona. We were going to the mountains near Barcelona and it was really uncomfortable while we were there because we hadn't brought the right clothes for it and because after each day in the mountains, we got soaked. So we were really uncomfortable and we complained to the director of the school and to the organizer of the school trip. They apologised and in the end, they took us to Barcelona for a few days.

Lucy

I was about seven and we traveled by car to Benidorm, me and my family, including my grandparents and my cousins. We were staying in the hotel and one morning, or two days before we were going to leave, my granddad looked through the balcony and asked my dad if he'd moved the car in the middle of the night and my dad said, no, the car should be there. My granddad was not in the parking lot, so my dad went down to look for it and they spent about three hours in the morning looking for it and it wasn't there. So our car had been stolen and so they went to the police and because they were talking in English, the police couldn't understand them. It was a bit of a mess and we had to go back on a bus, which took about two days, so we had to leave early and it was kind of a mess and we never found a car.

Tristan

The worst holiday was actually when I went with my dad to India and that's because he moved there for a posting because he works with a company that has to move him around a lot. So I went there with him, with my brother as well and we were thinking it was going to be a holiday, he was going to show us around the local sites and stuff, but in the end he just ended up working throughout the whole holiday whilst we sat at home getting a bit bored and stuff.

We were going to Puerto Rico from California and we had a layover in New York. We got caught in a blizzard, so we had to sleep in the airport the first night and they apologized but there was nothing we could do. We were waiting for them to get us a new flight and they put us in a hotel. Of course, we didn't pay for it but it was extremely dull and boring and we were 15 minutes from Manhattan, one of the most interesting cities. And well, we were all packed for sunny Caribbean weather even though it was Christmas time and we had no warm clothes so we can go out in the blizzard. We stayed there for two days and then we slept a fourth day in the airport again until we finally went over to Puerto Rico but the beginning of that trip was horrible.
