Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

Helen Keller is an American author and educator who was blind and deaf. Her education and training represent an extraordinary accomplishment in the education of persons with these disabilities. Keller was afflicted at the age of 19 months with an illness that left her blind and deaf. Helen was an unhappy child and often threw a tantrum. However, her mother took great care of her with patience and love. She used to hang out with the daughter of the family cook using the sign language of their own. Afterwards, Helen was examined by Alexander Graham Bell at the age of 6. As a result, he sent to her a 20-year-old teacher, Anne Sullivan from the Perkins Institution for the Blind in Boston, which Bell's son-in-law directed. Sullivan, a remarkable teacher, remained with Keller from March 1887 until her own death in October 1936.

Within months Keller had learned to feel objects and associate them with words spelled out by finger signals on her palm, to read sentences by feeling raised words on cardboard, and to make her own sentences by arranging words in a frame. Later, she also learned to lip-read by placing her fingers on the lips and throat of the speaker while the words were simultaneously spelled out for her. At age 14, she enrolled in the Wright-Humason School for the Deaf in New York City, and at 16 she entered the Cambridge School for Young Ladies in Massachusetts.

In this day and age, it's inevitable that your kid will need a cell phone at some point. Buying a phone for your kid is a big decision. Not only is it a financial investment, but you also need to consider Internet safety and how kids can use electronics in a healthy way. 'Today's parents are both blessed and cursed by technology options made available to their children,' says Titania Jordan, the chief parenting officer of parental-control app Bark. 'While the ability to locate and communicate with your children in real-time is incredible, the ability of others to do so can be frightening and dangerous.'

When considering which cell phone to buy for your child, consider their age, the intended users of the phone, and the parental control options. If your teen just started driving, a smartphone with a built in GPS and full calling abilities in case of emergency may be a good bet. For a younger kid, a simple phone with no internet access that lets them text their parents may be all they need. You may even decide they don't need a phone quite yet but can instead use a smart watch to text you and make short phone calls with approved contacts. To find the best cell phones for kids, we surveyed nearly 500 parents to learn about the phones they have bought for their own kids, as well as how their families navigate technology use. We also spoke to the Internet safety experts that specialize in kids' safe use of phones. Additionally, we reviewed guidance from the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) regarding when to give your child a cell phone.

34. What should parents consider when buying a smartphone for their kids?
  - A. its material
  - B. the child's age
  - C. its contact list
  - D. its GPS
35. What does Titania Jordan suggest?
  - A. Technology is just another burden for parents.
  - B. Parents should spend more time communicating to their children.
  - C. Parents should beware of strangers using technology to locate their children.
  - D. Children should only be allowed to use phone to text their parents.
36. Which can be inferred from the passage?
  - A. What children need is smart wearable gadgets, not phones.
  - B. The younger the kids are, the cheaper phone they should have.
  - C. Teenagers who are getting used to learning should own a phone with good GPS feature.
  - D. It is the price of the phone that parents should take into account when buying a phone.

37. These methods have been used to figure out the right cell phone for kids except
A. Internet safety experts    B. guidance from AAP
C. survey of parents' view    D. cell phone companies

38. The underlined phrase 'in this day and age' is closest in meaning to _____.
A. in the modern world    B. in the past    C. recently    D. in due course

39. The underlined phrase 'a good bet' is closest in meaning to _____.
A. a risk    B. an investment    C. an advantage    D. a brand

40. This passage is likely to be found in a
A. school textbook    B. technology magazine
C. technician's journal    D. annual report of a cell phone company
