

“¿Cómo se llama la persona que inventa las máquinas?”
le pregunté al profesor.
“Ingenieros”. Me contestó.
Ingeniero. No es para chicas, pensé.
¿Cómo se llaman las mujeres que trabajan con motores?
Busqué y encontré “mecánica”.
Seré mecánica.
Soy mecánica.
Cuido las máquinas, no las invento.
Las chicas no inventan, limpian.
Pero yo soy ingeniosa. Y, a veces, ingenua.
Por eso he empezado a contar cuentos de hadas reales.
“Érase una vez una ingeniera, en un gran castillo, que construía máquinas para enviar a las hadas al espacio...”
“Érase una vez una primera ministra que estaba harta de ver a los príncipes jugar a la guerra, en vez de trabajar...”

What is the name of the person who creates machines?

I asked the _____.

“_____”. He replied.

Engineer. That's not for women, I thought. What's the name of the women who work with motors? I searched and I found “_____”.

I will be mechanic. I am mechanic. I take care of machines. I don't invent them.

_____ don't invent, they _____.

But I am _____. And I am sometimes ingenua. That's why I started telling tales about real _____.

“Once upon a time, there was an engineer living in a _____, who built machines to send fairies to the Space”.

“Once upon a time there was a Prime _____ who was tired of seeing princes that only play war insted of _____.”
