IV. READING COMPREHENSION

Directions: Read a letter, a magazine article and a short story below. Choose the correct option that best answers each question.

A.

Dear Lula,

What you said about East Kalimantan Island is true. There are many things to see and to do in this unique province. I didn't visit all the regions, though. My parents took a one-week-tour package. But, you know what? We spent the nights at a longhouse called "Mancong". Together with other tourists from different countries, we stayed there for a week. It really gave me a new concept of togetherness. To tell you the truth, I kind of like it. About my picture dancing? Yes, I learned this traditional dance in one-day time. It wasn't that difficult. Dance performances are regular happenings, especially when groups of tourists arrive. So, the dance instructor was very happy when asked to teach us the dance. Keep the picture, OK! By the way, my mom bought a beautiful Samarinda sarong for your mother. Before we left for Sydney, my grandparents' hometown, we visited a center of Samarinda sarong crafting. I even tried to weave using "gedokan", a traditional tool for weaving the sarong. Well, I was poor at that. I was amazed by the workers' patience. For only one sarong, the workers have to weave it for almost one month. Can you imagine that?

OK then, that's all for now. Write to me soon.

Your best friend,

Maggie.

Tina and Ruby exchange glances. Their eyes meet, but they don't smile as they usually do when reacting to their teacher's jokes. When again the class bursts into laughter, Tina writes the word 'boring' followed by several exclamation marks on the back of her biology book. Ruby makes the same gesture. She sighs while flipping her book through the pages. Although they sit next to each other, they haven't been involved in a conversation since morning. Then the bell for the recession rings.

Tina goes to the library. She doesn't feel like wandering in the cafeteria bothering her classmates. She keeps murmuring while looking for something interesting to read. "Why is she mad at me? She's really annoying." Soon, she picks up a copy of 'chicken soup for the teenage soul'. She finds herself a nice spot, near the window. She looks through the window while picturing in her mind what happened this morning.

It was still early in the morning. "Hi Ruby, nice bag!" Tina used her usual nice tone to greet Ruby, her best friend since elementary school. There was no reaction. "Hey, Ruby wait up." Tina followed Ruby to her seat. "Where did you buy the bag? The color goes with your shoes. Can I have a look?" Tina kept asking, not knowing that Ruby was angry with her. When she tried to get a better look at the bag, Rubby snatched the bag back and said angrily, "Leave me alone!" Tina was shocked and speechless. She finally had the courage to ask, "What's wrong? What have I done?" There was no reply. "C'mon Ruby, talk to me. What did I do?" Tina tried to find the answer by looking Ruby in the eye. It didn't help. That's what happened in the morning.

After recession, Ms. Hanna starts the lesson about how to write a letter of encouragement. She teaches English, Ruby and Tina's favorite subject. But today, Ruby and Tina are not in the mood for studying. Tina decides to write a letter to Ruby asking why she is angry with her. She passes on the letter to Ruby. The reply comes in an instant: 'Why didn't you show up at the bookstore? You promised, didn't you?' Suddenly, everything falls into place. "Ruby didn't get the message," Tina whispers. She remembers she sent Ruby a text message to tell her that she couldn't make it. She had to go to the veterinarian. Her Persian baby cat was sick. "I'll talk to her after class, to clarify things," Tina thinks to herself. She's smiling. It's only a misunderstanding.
