

3 Complete the text below using the correct form of four of the words from Activities 1 and 2.

Effective communication has been part of our human identity for thousands of years, and evidence still exists today to show us methods people (a) to help them communicate long ago. Many ancient messaging systems use pictures, and images still (b) that were drawn in caves around 30 000 years ago. These are believed to represent a type of symbolic language. This later developed into pictography – an early form of writing. Ideas were communicated through drawing an (c) story, represented through a series of images organised in the order in which they took place. These became the basis for hieroglyphics, (d) the development of the now-famous writing style from ancient Egypt.

4 Write short definitions or give synonyms for these six words.

- a underlying
- b perception
- c draft
- d evaluate
- e constructive
- f semaphore

5 Draw lines to match the phrases to make complete sentences.

The trainees were given constructive	is all about perception.
There was an underlying tension in the room	you submit your final version.
Appreciating and understanding art	advice on how to improve.
I gave up trying to understand	before the committee evaluated it.
I suggest you write a draft before	semaphore, as it was too complicated.
He spent hours on the project	when the new management arrived.