Last weekend, Emily and her friend Daniel decided to organize a small gathering at Emily's house. The weather forecast said it would rain, so they planned indoor activities. "Shall we play board games or watch a movie?" asked Daniel. Emily suggested, "Let's do both! First, we'll play games, and later, we'll watch a movie together."

When the guests arrived, Emily greeted them warmly. "Please take off your coats and leave them here," she said. They enjoyed the snacks Emily had prepared, including sandwiches, a lot of cookies, and some lemonade. Daniel commented, "Your cooking is better than mine! These cookies are the best." Emily laughed and said, "Well, I had a little help from my mom."

During the gathering, Daniel noticed Emily's cat sitting quietly in the corner. "Your cat is much calmer than my dog," he said. Emily replied, "Yes, but dogs are great too. They're more playful." One of the guests, whose brother is a veterinarian, shared interesting stories about animals, which everyone enjoyed.

By the end of the night, Daniel was so tired he couldn't stay awake during the movie. Emily teased him, "You can't handle long gatherings! You need to build up some stamina." Everyone laughed and agreed it had been a wonderful evening.
