THE FLYING PARAMEDICS

4.1.
------	--

The Lake District, in the north-east of England, is one of the country's most popular national parks, and is loved by walkers and hikers for its wonderful lakes and mountains. However, it is not always a safe place, particularly if the weather suddenly changes, and the Mountain Rescue team is regularly called out to deal with emergencies.

4.2.
------	--

The paramedics of the rescue team have been testing a new way of reaching people who need their help – they have been trying out jet packs. The jet packs, made by Gravity Industries, are like a suit with two small engines attached to a person's arms to control direction, and a bigger engine on the back. A jet pack can fly at 50 km/h and can carry someone weighing 85 kg.

4.3.
------	--

'The biggest benefit of this new technology is that it's really fast,' explains one of the paramedics taking part in the test. 'Normally, it takes us around 20–25 minutes to reach a patient at the top of the mountain. The jet pack makes it possible to get there in under eight minutes. When you have someone who needs urgent medical attention, every minute counts, and reaching them faster could make all the difference.'

4.4.

Generations of children have imagined flying around in a jet pack, and James Bond once escaped in one too. But, sadly, we probably won't be seeing them on the streets any time soon. They cost £340,000, and because the kerosene they use for fuel is heavy, they can only carry enough of it to stay in the air for five or six minutes.

Przeczytaj cztery teksty (A–D) związane z szukaniem pracy. Wykonaj zadania 5.1.–5.7. zgodnie z poleceniami.

Tekst A

In a recent survey about job satisfaction, People Power asked workers what mattered to them the most. See what they said.

Tekst B

Hi Jake,

Thanks for your message. Glad to hear you're OK. Things are fine here too. Actually, they're better than fine. I applied for a couple of jobs over the summer holidays and I was offered both of them. One's with a nice family offering £9 an hour. The other one's working evenings at a supermarket round the corner. I didn't really like the people there, but they're offering £13.50 an hour, which is 50% more than the other one. The money is important to me because I'd really like to buy a new phone, and you know how expensive they are, but I'm not sure what to do. Anyway, I'll get in touch again when I've made my mind up.

Tekst C

Call Laura on 01632 960145 or email at Lauramarks@mymail.com

We will pay for your travel costs.

Tekst D

- Jane: Hey, Maria, how are things? Have you had any news about that job you applied for?
- Maria: Yeah, I got the job with that family in Hensington. Do you know them – Laura and Ben Marks?
- Jane: Yes, of course. They live just down the street from us. They're really nice. When do you start?
- Maria: Right after the end of term. The only thing I'm worried about is how to get to your village. I was offered a job in the supermarket that's a two-minute walk from home, which would've been really easy. What are the buses like?
- Jane: Well, you have to get the bus to Standford, change there and get another bus to Hensington. It takes almost an hour each way.
- Maria: Oh, OK, well, at least it's doable.

Przeczytaj tekst. Z podanych odpowiedzi wybierz właściwą, zgodną z treścią tekstu. Zakreśl jedną z liter: A, B, C albo D.

‘You don’t often hear people saying they are bad at history or English,’ says Harriet Jones, ‘but people from eight to 80 are happy to say that they are bad at maths. And even worse, the people who are listening will often agree. It has become almost normal, almost OK to be bad at maths. But that’s not OK, and we have to do something about it.’ And so, Harriet is trying to get people to feel more positive about maths by writing books, giving talks and visiting schools.

Harriet herself is convinced that maths is by far the most important school subject. It changes the way your brain works and makes you cleverer, and that lasts a lifetime. And of course, it has practical uses, such as when you are out shopping or deciding how to pay for a holiday. It can also be fun, almost like a game, and many people say that when you really understand maths, the world becomes a more wonderful place.

Studies show that most children under the age of eleven are still excited by maths. At secondary school, particularly at around the age of fifteen or sixteen, many students – and girls far more than boys – begin to lose interest. ‘This is really terrible,’ says Harriet, ‘because it can have effects that last a long time. If you don’t understand maths, your chances of getting a well-paid job in a bank are almost zero. You will never be an engineer or an architect, you shut down a lot of possibilities. And the final problem is that parents who don’t like maths will pass that message on to their children.’

Speaking for myself, I know that almost happened to me when I was fifteen and at an all-girls school in England. I hated maths lessons and could never do my homework. Nobody else liked maths either, and the reason was that our teacher wasn’t able to explain anything properly. Luckily for me, she moved to a new school after my first term with her, and the difference was amazing. Maths with our new teacher was fun, everything suddenly became clear and everyone in the class loved our lessons.

There may not be one simple answer, but it cannot be right that we allow so many young people to stop studying maths and do such damage to their future. The government needs to do more, teachers need to do more, and parents need to do more! If they can do it in other countries, then we can do it here. The time has come to stop making excuses and to start repairing a system that is broken.

6.1. What does Harriet want to do about the problem of maths?

- A. She wants to show people how easy maths is.
- B. She wants to concentrate on helping older people.
- C. She wants schools to use different books.
- D. She wants to change attitudes towards maths.

6.2. What, for Harriet, makes maths so special?

- A. It is full of beautiful ideas.
- B. It increases your intelligence.
- C. It is useful when you travel.
- D. It can save you money.

- 6.3. Harriet thinks teenagers should study maths because
- A. everyone is capable of doing well.
 - B. they will get a higher salary in the future.
 - C. it will give them a wider choice of careers.
 - D. they will be unable to help their children later in life.
- 6.4. According to the writer, what happened when her new teacher came?
- A. She found it easier to understand maths.
 - B. The students in her class students behaved better.
 - C. She was given less homework to do.
 - D. Her parents sent her to a different school.
- 6.5. The last paragraph of the article shows that the writer feels
- A. confused.
 - B. angry.
 - C. discouraged.
 - D. anxious.

THE MEMORY MAN

After a big bank robbery in Birmingham, England in October 2020, the police were getting a lot of criticism from the media and from politicians. They had not found any of the stolen money, and, worse, they had no idea who the criminals were.

The men who carried out the robbery had been very careful. They had worn gloves, so they had left no fingerprints behind. 7.1. ____ So the only real clue that was left was a short bit of film from a security camera.
