On my 17th birthday, which was 3 years ago, my father gave me a motorcycle as a birthday gift. Despite the motorcycle being officially mine, my father did not permit me to ride it on my own.

My first experience riding a motorcycle was when I was 17 years old. Before 17, a motorcycle was like a luxury thing for me. So, I was never brave enough to try to ride it. However, it changed when I celebrated my 17th birthday.

It was because he thought I was still too young and could not control my emotions in the streets. However, I kept asking him to teach and watch me until he trusted me to ride my own motorcycle.

After around 3 weeks of regular training, finally my father allowed me to ride the motorcycle he had gifted to me. Subsequently, I could go anywhere on my own.

Although my father had given me permission to ride a motorcycle, he kept telling me that I should be careful, watch around, and wear safety gear when riding. Thus, it kept me safe.
