

Writing Practice: Organizing Ideas into Paragraphs

[Title]

[Paragraph 1: Introduction]

[Write a topic sentence introducing the subject of your writing. Provide a brief description of what it is and some general information.]

[Paragraph 2: Habitat]

[Write a topic sentence about where the subject lives. Explain the places it can be found and how it builds or finds shelter.]

[Paragraph 3: Abilities and Characteristics]

[Write a topic sentence about the abilities or special characteristics of the subject. Describe how it moves, finds food, or communicates.]

[Paragraph 4: Different Types]

[Write a topic sentence about the different types or variations of the subject. Give examples of different kinds and their unique traits.]

Example:

Bees

Bees are insects. They have six legs, two wings, and their bodies are covered in tiny hairs. Most bees live in groups and work together in a colony.

Bees live in hives. Some bees build hives in trees, while others make nests underground or inside walls. They create honeycombs from wax to store honey and protect their young.

Bees are great pollinators. They collect nectar from flowers and help plants grow by carrying pollen. Bees also communicate through dance to show other bees where to find food.

There are many types of bees. Honeybees make honey, while bumblebees are larger and fuzzy. Some bees, like carpenter bees, live alone and do not build hives.
