L.S. LOWRY

Laurence Stephen Lowry was born in Manchester, a city in the north of England, in 1887. He hated school and was happy when he left to work in an office. His colleagues there were friendly and often asked him to go to the cinema or theatre in the evenings but he did not go; he preferred to go to art school.

Lowry loved walking through the city streets, looking at people doing everyday things. He painted these things in his pictures. His parents thought his paintings were very good but nobody ever bought one. Then one day. A man who knew a lot about art bought one and showed it to some people in the art business.

Suddenly, many people knew Lowry's paintings, but he could only paint in the evenings until he stopped working when he was sixty-five.
