

summers foggy Atlantic inland size temperature mild March Celsius precipitation

Belarus has a humid continental climate with four distinct seasons and a sharp contrast between severe winters and warm

The average annual is 5.8 degrees Celsius. Average monthly temperatures vary by 24 °C, ranging from -6 degrees on average in January to that of 18 degrees Celsius in summer.

Belarus has an average annual (rain and snow) of 550 to 700 mm, spread evenly throughout all months.

The average number of sunlight hours in Minsk is 1815 (of 4383 possible). It means that it is sunny 41,4 % of daylight hours. The remaining 58,6 % of daylight hours are cloudy, or misty, mostly from October to

In general, there are no significant (great) differences between the districts of Belarus, due to the small of the country.

The climate is influenced by the country's location, the domination of flat relief and relative remoteness (отдалённость) from the Ocean.

On the whole, the climate of Belarus is , which means you can experience various weather in various seasons and enjoy doing various things.