Teenage Advice Forum

Dear Esmé,

I can't sleep, and my friends at school say you can help me with this problem. Last night, I was at home with my parents. We were watching a football match on TV, and my brother and sister were staying at my grandparents' house. Mum and Dad went to bed at 10 p.m. and I went at 10:30 p.m. I quickly fell asleep, but I woke up at 11:30 p.m. I felt sleepy, but something was keeping me awake. After a while, I got up and came downstairs. I watched some reality shows. Then I ate a lot of chocolate, but I still didn't feel tired, so I played some video games and got to sleep again at 3 a.m. I'm really tired now, and I can't study.

Why couldn't I sleep last night, Esmé?
How many hours should I sleep every night?
Please help!

Brigitte, 16

Dear Brigitte,

I'm sorry to hear you didn't sleep well last night. You need to sleep for around nine hours, but most teenagers don't get enough sleep. When you really can't sleep, it's a good idea to get up, but you were doing some of the wrong things downstairs. For example, you were eating chocolate, which has lots of sugar, so it kept you awake. It also gives some people a headache. And reality shows are too loud, and it's not a good idea to play video games late at night. Next time, get up, but it's important to do some things to keep calm. You could read a book or listen to some classical music. Good luck!
