MUARO JAMBI TEMPLE

Muaro Jambi Temple is considered one of the richest archaeological sites on the island of Sumatra. The eight temple-like structures appear to be Buddhist, and were probably built around the 14th century.

Archaeologists conclude that the site was the center of Old Jambi, the capital of the ancient Malay kingdom which reigned supreme about ten centuries ago. The capital was sieged and destroyed in 1377 by armies from Burma. For centuries, the site had been lost and forgotten deep in the jungle, only to be rediscovered in 1920 by a British military expedition team.

Muaro Jambi temple complex covers an area of 12 km2, along the side of Batanghari river. There are eight main temples in the complex. All of them are located in the center area, fortified by walls. Three of them are already renovated.

In 1982, a 32-centimeters tall female bronze statue was found at Koto Kandis, in the Muara Sabak sub district. It is believed to be the goddess Laksmi, holding a lotus bud in her left. In addition to the archaeological sites, many visitors find the riverside an ideal recreation and picnic spot.

Kasepuhan Keraton

The Kasepuhan Keraton (Palace) is located in the sub-district of Lemahwungkuk in the City of Cirebon, built by Prince Mas Mochammad Arifin II in 1529. This is, therefore, the oldest palace in Java with the longest history. All royal families of Cirebon still live on until today, but all are now, of course, subjects of the Republic of Indonesia.

Standing on a total land area of 10 hectares, the Kasepuhan Keraton is the largest, most impressive and best kept among the Cirebon palaces, where every niche carries its own historic significance. The inner buildings are all painted white where the throne room, living rooms of the royal household, and reception areas to meet guests are found. The palace stands on the south side facing the large green square where the Sang Cipta Rasa Grand Mosque stands on the western side.

Another interesting feature of the palace is the Lawang Sanga building located on its south side, directly on the banks of Krayan River. This is the tax and customs office during the reign of the Cirebon Kingdom.

All goods from overseas entering the kingdom must pass the Krayan River where the king's officials will levy the necessary customs duty. This building is most significant for the wealth and welfare of the kingdom.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

Topeng Monyet

Thousands of macaques are bred or captured from the wild to be used as street performers, or known as "Topeng Monyet". The macaques are used to perform street shows; wearing funny masks, riding bicycles, performing acrobatic moves and doing amusing things. However, such shows should be banned for a few reasons.

First, Topeng Monyet is a kind of exploitation of monkeys for money. The monkeys are hung from chains for long periods to train them to walk on their hind legs like humans. Their teeth are extracted so they can't bite and they are tortured to remain obedient. The monkeys are often outfitted in dresses and cowboy hats and forced to carry parasols or ride tiny bikes. This animal abuse will definitely hurt the monkeys.

Second, banning masked monkey shows can help improve public order. Topeng Monyet is often performed when traffic is backed up at notoriously congested intersections. This will disturb the sight and create traffic jams for many motorists or pedestrians will slow down to watch the shows.

Third, banning the dancing monkeys is a necessary public health measure. It is important to rescue the monkeys from street performances and help prevent diseases carried by the monkeys.

The monkeys used in Topeng Monyet may not be healthy and may have potential for some diseases such as tuberculosis and hepatitis.

Considering the reasons stated above, Topeng Monyet should be banned for it exploits the monkeys, causes traffic jams and spreads illnesses such as tuberculosis and hepatitis.

THE ALAIN'S RESIDENCE

The Alain's residence is a beautiful and well-maintained home that is a model of cleanliness and waste management. From the moment we step inside, we notice how everything is in its place and how clean and fresh the air feels.

One of the key factors that contribute to the cleanliness of the house is Mr. Alain and his family's commitment to waste management. They have implemented a comprehensive recycling program that includes separating paper, plastic, and glass into different bins. They also compost food waste in a bin in their garden.

To minimize waste, the Alain family has also opted for reusable containers and packaging materials for their food and other household items. They use washable cloth napkins and towels instead of disposable plastic ones. This not only reduces their waste but also saves money in the long run.

2. Brown bins (manure)

4. Water
5. Soil

7. EM solution

Steps:

1. Make a layer of organic waste
2. Make a second layer with brown bins
3. Repeat steps 1 and 2 until the drum fully
4. If it is full, close the drum using burlap sacks
5. After the seventh day, open and stir the compost. Then close it. Do this step once every seven days.
6. To speed up the composting process, we can add the EM solution that can be bought at the farm shop store
7. After 4-6 weeks, if the fertilizer mixture has turned blackish and no longer smelly, it means the composting process has finished.

The Great Hiker Timmy

In a small town nestled at the foot of a magnificent mountain, there lived a young boy named Timmy. Every weekend, he would embark on adventures to explore the wilderness and climb the beautiful peaks that surrounded his hometown. Timmy's hikes were not just about reaching the summits; he also had a profound appreciation for the natural beauty that adorned the trails. He was particularly fond of the wildflowers that painted the mountain slopes with vibrant colors. To him, these flowers were like little bursts of magic in the wilderness.

One sunny morning, as Timmy set off on a new hiking expedition, he noticed something that troubled him deeply. Along the path, he encountered several other hikers who were plucking wildflowers. They seemed oblivious to the fact that they were disturbing the fragile balance of nature. Timmy knew that these mountains were not just a playground for hikers like him; they were also a home for countless plants and animals. Some of these wildflowers were rare and could only be found in this region. It was vital to protect them.

That evening, Timmy couldn't shake off the thought of those hikers picking the wildflowers. He decided he needed to do something to raise awareness and protect the delicate ecosystem of the mountain. With determination in his heart, Timmy got to work. He created a striking poster with a message: "Protect Our Mountain's Treasures-Don't Pick the Wildflowers!" He wanted the message to be clear and bold.

But Timmy didn't stop there. He knew that sometimes, pictures could speak louder than words. So, he decided to create a comic book. In his comic, he depicted the adventures of a young hiker, just like himself, who discovered the importance of preserving the mountain's natural beauty. The comic illustrated the harm that could be caused by picking wildflowers and how it affected the mountain's ecosystem.

Timmy printed copies of his poster and comic and posted them at the trailheads, in local shops, and even online. He wanted to reach as many fellow hikers as possible. To his surprise, the response was overwhelming. Many hikers shared their concerns and joined the campaign to protect the wildflowers. They started organizing clean-up events and educational programs to raise awareness about preserving the mountain's beauty.

Over time, the culture among hikers began to shift. More and more people understood the importance of leaving the wildflowers untouched. They learned to admire the beauty of these fragile blooms without harming them.

Timmy's efforts had paid off. He had transformed from a passionate young hiker into a true advocate for nature conservation. The mountain and its wildflowers were safe, thanks to his dedication and the support of the hiking community.

And so, with each step he took on his beloved trails, Timmy knew he was not only exploring nature's wonders but also helping to protect them for generations to come.

12. Why did Timmy appreciate wildflowers on his hikes?
    A. Because he wanted to sell them
    B. Because they were valuable
    C. Because they were magical
    D. Because they were delicious
    E. Because they were dangerous

Life-changing through Magical Tech

There was once a small, but cozy and humble village called Kreta Village. The village residents were diverse in terms of their races, ethnicities, and religions, but they lived in harmony. Despite its diversity, they had the same goal of giving the best education to young generations.

One day, a group of high school students stumbled upon something extraordinary taking place in their school: a cool Al technology that would change their ways of life.The central government had voiced that all regions, especially in rural areas could experience technological advancement, including the introduction to Al technology. The government made a tech laboratory, in which students could access and explore more about technology.

One day, while chatting in the tech laboratory, the students heard about a new Al feature that could copy voices, create animated versions of themselves, and help with tricky school stuff. Imagine the surprise and joy when they realized this futuristic tech had found its way to their little school.

The fun began with the voice imitation feature. To picture this, the students mimicked each other's voices during a theater class or language lessons. Laughs echoed in the hallways as the Al flawlessly copied their voices, adding a dash of amusement to their school days. However, the real game-changer was Al helping with schoolwork. It made tough subjects easier by breaking them down into simpler bits. Students could learn at their own pace, with the Al offering explanations, quizzes, and virtual study sessions. Even the teachers, who were unsure at first, joined the excitement. Together, they made sure the Al worked with regular lessons, making education more fun and effective.

Word spread quickly about Kreta Village's tech makeover. The village became a symbol of how technology could make education better, no matter where you were. The buzz of Al and the happy chatter of students signaled a new beginning. The students of Kreta High School are now not only keeping up with the times, but they are also leading the way!

20. What did the buzz of Al and the happy chatter of students in Kreta High School symbolize?
    A. The need for efficient teaching methods
    B. The importance of education in rural areas
    C. A new beginning in technology-driven education
    D. The rising interest in the Al experiment in a village
    E. The presence of educational resources in Kreta High School

SEEKING A PROPER NEW JOB

John : Hey, Marry. Can I ask for your opinion on something?
Merry : Sure, what's up?
John : I'm thinking of applying for a new job, but I am not sure if it's the right move for me. I've been with my current company for a few years now, and I'm comfortable with my role, but I feel like I am not growing as much as I could.
Marry : That's understandable. What's the job you're looking at?
John : It's a similar role, but with a different company. They have a reputation for being more innovative and dynamic which is what I am looking for.
Marry : have you done any research on the company culture and work environment?
John : Yeah, I've read some reviews online and talked to a few people who work there. They seem to have a good work-life balance and encourage creativity.
Marry : Well, it sounds like a good opportunity but you should also consider the potential downsides. For example, you might have to work longer hours or deal with a more demanding boss.
John : That's a good point. I also worry that I might not fit in with the team or the company culture.
Marry : have you ever considered reaching out to anyone who works there to get a better sense of the work environment?
John : I haven't yet, but that's a good idea. I am just hesitant to put myself out there and risk rejection.
Marry : it's normal to feel that way, but sometimes you have to take a leap of faith to achieve your goals. Plus, getting rejected is not the end of the world. It just means you're one step closer to finding the right fit.
John : Thanks , Mary. You've given me a lot to think about.
Marry : of course .ultimately, the decision is yours, but it's always good to get different perspectives before making a big move like this.
John : I appreciate your input. I 'll let you know what I decide.

SEEKING A PROPER NEW JOB

John : Hey, Marry. Can I ask for your opinion on something?
Merry : Sure, what's up?
John : I'm thinking of applying for a new job, but I am not sure if it's the right move for me. I've been with my current company for a few years now, and I'm comfortable with my role, but I feel like I am not growing as much as I could.
Marry : That's understandable. What's the job you're looking at?
John : It's a similar role, but with a different company. They have a reputation for being more innovative and dynamic which is what I am looking for.
Marry : have you done any research on the company culture and work environment?
John : Yeah, I've read some reviews online and talked to a few people who work there. They seem to have a good work-life balance and encourage creativity.
Marry : Well, it sounds like a good opportunity but you should also consider the potential downsides. For example, you might have to work longer hours or deal with a more demanding boss.
John : That's a good point. I also worry that I might not fit in with the team or the company culture.
Marry : have you ever considered reaching out to anyone who works there to get a better sense of the work environment?
John : I haven't yet, but that's a good idea. I am just hesitant to put myself out there and risk rejection.
Marry : it's normal to feel that way, but sometimes you have to take a leap of faith to achieve your goals. Plus, getting rejected is not the end of the world. It just means you're one step closer to finding the right fit.
John : Thanks , Mary. You've given me a lot to think about.
Marry : of course .ultimately, the decision is yours, but it's always good to get different perspectives before making a big move like this.
John : I appreciate your input. I 'll let you know what I decide.

Why Social Media Should Stop Fake News

In the digital era, social media has become an integral part of people's daily lives, serving as a primary source of information and communication. However, the unchecked spread of fake news (or often called a hoax) on these platforms poses a significant threat to society. This has led to a pressing debate on whether social media platforms should bear the responsibility of regulating fake news. This argument contends that social media platforms should indeed take an active role in combating misinformation to safeguard the public from the adverse effects of misleading information.

Fake news easily spreads on social media, and that's inappropriate. It can mess up how people think and decide things. Social media needs to stop fake news from going everywhere. Moreover, misinformation on social media can have far-reaching consequences, affecting individuals, communities, and nations. Platforms should play an active role in preventing the spread of deceptive content to avoid panic, fear, and societal unrest. The platforms can present new features in detecting hoaxes before they have gone too far.

As a matter of fact, the pervasive spread of fake news on social media demands action. By taking responsibility for regulating misinformation, these platforms can contribute to the preservation of truth, protect societal values, and ensure the well-being of their users. Social media platforms must recognize their role in combating misinformation and implement effective measures to prioritize accurate and reliable information.

THE BENEFITS OF PHYSICAL ACTIVITY FOR HEALTH

Andika : Have you read our school article about the health benefits of physical activity?
Hesti : Nope! What is it saying?
Andika : Being physically active, according to the article, can improve our overall health and wellbeing, lower our risk of cronics, such as heart disease and diabetes, and even improve our mental health.
Hesti : That's fastening. I know exercise is good for us, but I have no idea it has so many advantages.
Andika : It is, indeed, quite impressive. According to the article, even minor amounts of physical activity can have a positive impact on our health. I believe that we don't have to be a fitness fanatic to reap the benefits.

Andika : It can be difficult, but as I see it, there are numerous ways to incorporate physical activity into our daily routines. Walking, cycling, dancing, and swimming are all excellent options. It seems to me that gardening or housework can also be considered moderate physical activity.
