We've advanced so much in education since I started teaching in the 80s and it's mostly thanks to technology. I have an interactive whiteboard and learning is much more interesting. Of course, there are always disadvantages. I often get messages from colleagues at the weekend about new teaching policies or questions about marking! In addition, technology is not 100% reliable, but for me, there are more pros than cons. I enjoy teaching much more today.

A grateful teacher, 50

2

We have more choice now with shops. I do everything online; from booking holidays to buying clothes and food shopping. It makes my day-to-day life much easier because we are a family of five and there's always so much to buy. Now I have everything pre-ordered, so with a click of a button all my groceries for the week are sent and delivered in 24 hours – so simple! My life would be much more stressful without these services that didn't exist 20 years ago. I don't know how my mother managed!

A working mum, 47

I've lived and worked abroad for 20 years and catching up with friends and family is so important. We don't always speak on the phone, but sometimes a message is enough. Communication is so simple these days. Wherever you are in the world you can be in contact with your loved ones and this, for me, is really important. I also think there's more opportunity to meet people. We're sociable, but in a very different way from our grandparents.

A travel lover, 38

I've worked in the entertainment industry for many years and it has changed a lot – mostly for the good. I do worry a little about the future of entertainment, however. The quality and choice available has improved in so many ways, but people are choosing to watch series over films, which is a worry. We don't want to lose our cinemas. Today, I think there are a range of genres of programmes, so everyone can find something they like. This is definitely positive.

A modern traditionalist, 60

In my local supermarket there are six brands of coffee! It makes choosing difficult, so I'm not sure all this choice is positive – I spend longer at the supermarket than I used to. However, I do enjoy the great range we have nowadays and I wouldn't go back! I also think because there are so many different brands, products are of a higher quality than when I was younger. Online reviews also mean that companies and services have to be very careful, but I'm not sure that all this has improved customer service. You either get excellent or awful service. There's definitely more quality control today and the consumer has much more power than before.

A forward-thinking 70-year-old
