Hay-on-Wye

Hay-on-Wye is a small town in Wales, just on the border with England. It's surrounded by beautiful countryside, and close to the Black Mountains. Today Hay is known as the 'Town of books'.

The man who created this identity for the town and set up the first bookshop there is Richard Booth. He opened a second-hand bookshop in the old fire station in 1961. He bought a lot of books from abroad. He thought that if you sell books from many different countries, customers will come from many different countries – and he was right. Today there are more than thirty bookshops in Hay-on-Wye.

Richard Booth received a lot of publicity in 1977. He announced that Hay was an independent nation and that he was the king. He said that his horse was the Prime Minister! He now lives in Germany, but his shop is still in Hay.

In the late 1970s Hay became the world's first official Book Town and ten years later, in 1988, the first Hay Literary Festival was held. At first, it took place in different town buildings, including the primary school, but now it is celebrated just outside the town, because it's too big! It's very successful. Today about 80,000 visitors attend every year in June, and some of the best known literary figures and celebrities give talks. In 2001 the former American President Bill Clinton was the star speaker.
