Mount Everest is the highest mountain in the world. It sits in the Himalayan mountain range. It is located north of India on the border between Nepal and Tibet. Everest is over eight kilometers above sea level. That is about 110 city blocks. The mountain is named after a man named Sir George Everest. He was a British surveyor general who lived in India in the 1800s.

For over one hundred years, people tried again and again to climb the towering mountain. They always failed. Mount Everest has high winds and freezing temperatures. The air is thin, and there is a risk of avalanches. In 1953, two men, Edmund Hillary from New Zealand and TenzingNorgay from Nepal were able to reach the top of Mount Everest for the first time. It took them over two months. Since then several thousand people have been able to reach the top.

The three men, Bui Van Ngoi, Phan Thanh Nhien and Nguyen Mau Linh were the first Vietnamese people to reach the top of Mount Everest. They reached the summit in 2008. Do you think you could do it?
