Making the Grade

When I was very young, I fell and broke my leg, and had to spend some time in hospital. It was then that I first became (00) _____ A _____ to be a doctor tha day. My mother likes to show a photograph she took of (1) _____ when I was just 4 years old – bandaging the arm of one of my dolls with toilet paper. Even in (2) _____, I would tell my teachers that when I grew up I wanted to become a doctor and help children. I knew that, to make my dream come true, I had to work hard. In high school, I never missed classes to go to the mall as my friends often did. I preferred to study and even (3) _____ advanced classes in biology and chemistry. In the end, my hard work paid off. I was able to graduate a full year early from high school and got a (4) _____ to study medicine at a top university. Of course, medical school was even more challenging, but I was ambitious and wanted to do my very best. After medical school, I specialised in children's medicine. At the hospital where I work now, my colleagues and I always help and support (5) _____ as we do our best to save children's lives. Looking back, I realise that it took a lot of hard work to get where I am today, but I don't regret any of it. My dream really did come true!
