Culture Note

Chinese clothing has varied by region and time, and is recorded by the artifacts and arts of Chinese culture. There are distinctive styles in clothing in different decades, such as the Zhongshan Suit in 1950s, the green military uniform in 1960s and the Qipao in 1980s.

Chinese fashion has drastically changed over time. Contemporary urban clothing seemed to have developed an obsession with brand names. In major urban centres, especially Shanghai, an increased Western look is preferred, and there is an emphasis on formal wear over casual wear for adults on the streets. Teenagers prefer brand names and Western clothing. Children usually wear clothes decorated with cartoon characters.
