

SPEAKING FOCUS

Verbs

to lack, lacked

to threaten, threatened to compare, compared

Vocabulary

disabled

appreciation distinctive contrary

harsh drastic

self-esteem

essence

local custom

Expressions

social pride

to take for granted

dual nationality

to be cut off

Grammar

I don't know if all issues will have been discussed before lunchtime.

Are you sure the products will have been sent to the customer before the deadline?

The project will have been approved before you can imagine.

She won't have been convinced by the time we get there.

Will their practices have been accepted by the authorities?

Secrets of Success

Don't try to teach a pig how to sing.
It may frustrate you and annoy the pig.

Inputi

We lack arguments to convince them.

He lacks confidence and courage.

They have threatened to take us to court.

Big storms threaten this area every summer.

You must compare the quality of the products.

I hate being compared to others.

She has great self-esteem.

I'll always show them my appreciation.

He became physically disabled after the car accident.

I am contrary to making rushed decisions.

She was forced to make a drastic decision.

Tourists should respect local customs.

You shouldn't have taken her for granted.

He just got his dual nationality.

He's not going to have told anyone about that.

They are not going to have changed their minds.

She's going to have decided what to do by then.

The power is going to have been cut off by the end of the day.

Our plan is certainly going to have been completed by then.

The tests are going to have been corrected by next class.

The house is going to have been painted by the time you return.

Express Yourself

Keep in touch.

SPEAKING FOCUS

Activities

A. Answer the questions in English.

1. What is something you lack in your life right now?
2. Have you ever been threatened by someone? What happened?
3. How do you compare the weather in your city to other places you have visited?
4. Do you think people with dual nationality have more advantages than others? Why?
5. Do you respect the local customs when traveling? Give an example.

B. Translate the sentences into English.

1. Muitas pessoas com deficiência enfrentam barreiras no mercado de trabalho.
2. Os produtos serão enviados antes do prazo final, como prometido.
3. Nós não vamos ser convencidos até chegarmos lá.
4. A prática deles será aceita pelas autoridades em breve.
5. Ela sempre se orgulha de sua herança cultural.

SPEAKING FOCUS

C. Translate the sentences into Portuguese.

1. The harsh weather conditions made it impossible to continue the journey.

2. I always compare my achievements to those of others.

3. We were cut off from the rest of the world due to the storm.

4. Many people take their health for granted until they get sick.

5. Her distinctive style made her a famous artist.

Text

Languages are not created from one day to the next, and it's difficult to find their origins. English, for example, was born as a fusion of languages spoken by Germanic peoples, such as Saxons and Angles, mixed with Latin and even old French, which was also a mixture of other languages, and so on. The complexity of the process from which a language is formed is responsible for richness in vocabulary – different words with similar meaning like "liberty" and "freedom" are an example. And sometimes you come across something that seems odd in the language, but it's there because of that richness. For example, have you ever seen a prescription for a medicine in English? If you have, did you notice the letters "Rx" in it? "Rx" doesn't seem to have any connection to "pharmacy", or medicine in general. However, it does in Latin. The letters "Rx" abbreviate the Latin word "recipe", which is a form of the verb "to take". Doctors write Rx in the heading of prescriptions as in instruction "to take" the medicine. Very simple, right?

D. Choose the correct alternative.

1. According to the text, what is responsible for the richness in vocabulary in a language?

- a) The evolution of words over time.
- b) The mixture of different languages.

SPEAKING FOCUS

- c) The simplicity of the language structure.
- d) The influence of modern languages.

2. What does the abbreviation "Rx" in a prescription stand for?

- a) "Recipe," a form of the verb "to take" in Latin.
- b) "Reciprocity," meaning the exchange of medicines.
- c) "Remedy," referring to the medical treatment.
- d) "Relax," an instruction to calm down.

3. How does the text explain the oddness of the "Rx" abbreviation?

- a) It has no connection to medicine in modern English.
- b) It is a remnant from ancient Egyptian language.
- c) It comes from Latin, which is why it seems odd to modern speakers.
- d) It was created for simplicity in prescriptions.

4. What is the relationship between the English language and Latin, as stated in the text?

- a) English evolved directly from Latin without any other influence.
- b) Latin influenced English through Germanic languages.
- c) Latin was the first language spoken by the Anglo-Saxons.
- d) Latin had no influence on the development of the English language.

5. According to the text, what example is given to show the richness of the English language?

- a) The complexity of its sentence structure.
- b) The existence of words like "liberty" and "freedom" that have similar meanings.
- c) The extensive use of Latin in English vocabulary.
- d) The frequent use of abbreviations like "Rx."

E. Listening.

1. _____
2. _____
3. _____

SPEAKING FOCUS

4. _____
5. _____
6. _____
7. _____
8. _____
9. _____
10. _____