Vietnamese lifestyle has changed a lot over the years. In the past, life was simpler, and most people lived in small villages. Families often worked together in farming, and their daily lives were connected to nature. People grew their own food like rice and vegetables, and raised animals. Traditional Vietnamese houses were made of wood or bamboo, and families would gather around for meals and share stories. Social life was more community-based, with festivals and gatherings being important parts of daily life.

Today, the lifestyle in Viet Nam is much more modern, especially in the big cities. Many people now live in apartments or modern houses, and technology plays a big role in everyday life. The younger generation spends a lot of time on smartphones; and social media is popular. People now buy their food from supermarkets or online, and many work in offices or businesses rather than on farms. However, even with these changes, some traditions remain. Family meals are still important, and Vietnamese people continue to celebrate festivals like Tet and Mid-Autumn Festival.

Although the lifestyle has become more connected to the global world, the core values of family and community are still strong in Viet Nam.
