Dear Lina & Julian,

I hope you're doing well! I just 1.) came back from an unforgettable trip through Miami and Orlando, and I have been thinking about it non-stop. As a very creative being, I always 2.) _____ a way to turn every adventure into a story worth sharing—with a bit of creativity, of course.

Right now, I 3.) _____ at home, sipping coffee and looking through the hundreds of photos I 4.) _____. It's amazing how quickly time flies when you're traveling. The entire week was filled with excitement, surprises, and valuable lessons.

In Miami, I 5.) _____ along Ocean Drive, took photos of the art deco buildings, and tasted delicious Cuban food. I have always loved trying new dishes, so this was a dream! I 6.) _____ a single afternoon indoors. Why would I? The weather was perfect and the energy of the city was contagious.

But let me tell you about something unexpected. One evening, I got lost trying to find my Airbnb. My phone battery had died and I hadn't written down the address. I 7.) _____ for nearly an hour when I finally asked a stranger for help. It wasn't fun in the moment, but it taught me a lot. Since then, I have always written down the address before going out.

After that experience, I traveled to Orlando, where I visited the theme parks I 8.) _____ since I was a child. I have ridden roller coasters before, but nothing compared to what I experienced there. I laughed, screamed, and even 9.) _____ my voice from so much fun. I have never felt so carefree.

Now that I'm home, I have been using my trip as inspiration in class. My students 10.) _____ hearing the stories, and I have noticed that they pay more attention when grammar comes with a real-life story. Maybe that's the magic of teaching with emotion.

What about you? Have you ever gotten lost in a new city? 11.) _____
something from a travel mistake?

I'd love to hear your stories too.

Warm regards,

Your lover ChatGTP
