The story of Lutung Kasarung tells the tale of a princess named Purbasari who was born with a beautiful singing voice. She was exiled by her stepmother, and she wandered into a forest where she met a monkey named Lutung Kasarung. They became friends, and Lutung Kasarung helped Purbasari overcome her loneliness.

Complication

One day, Purbasari met a prince who fell in love with her singing voice. They soon became lovers, but Purbasari's stepmother found out about their relationship and tried to kill her. Lutung Kasarung helped Purbasari escape, but in the process, he was killed by the stepmother.

Coda

Purbasari eventually became queen and had a statue made in honor of Lutung Kasarung. The statue was imbued with magical powers, and it became a symbol of protection and prosperity for the people of the kingdom.

Orientation

The significance of this story in Indonesian culture lies in its representation of the power of friendship, loyalty, and love. It also highlights the importance of standing up to injustice and oppression.
