The Dog Train

(1) Imagine you're walking down the street when you suddenly see a tractor pulling a row of barrels[1]. In each barrel, there's a different dog, sitting on a seat. This is exactly what people saw in the town of Fort Worth in Texas. But what's the story behind this strange dog train?

(2) For over 20 years, Eugene Bostick and his brother Walter took care of dogs that people didn't want anymore. Dogs that weren't healthy or had behavior problems were often left on the street without food or water. At first, Eugene and his brother would take the dogs to the vet. The vet would check for diseases and give them the medicine they needed. Then, they gave the dogs a place to stay and made sure that they had enough food.

(3) Over time[2], more and more dog owners who didn't want their dogs would leave their dogs at Eugene and Walter's farm. They let them remain on the farm and took care of them. They rescued more than 30 dogs.

(4) They wanted to find a way to take the dogs on trips. One day, Eugene thought of an idea – a dog train. They collected a few barrels, cut them to make seats for the dogs and connected them to wheels. Then, they tied the barrels in a row behind Eugene's tractor. After they trained the dogs to get on and off the train, they started taking them on tours around the town. The dogs loved it! Every time they heard the tractor, they would run to the train and jump into their seats.

(5) The local people put pictures of Eugene driving the happy dogs on the Internet. The dog train became famous and people started coming to Fort Worth to see it.
