One day I (go) for a walk down the street. I was hungry so I (stop) at a food stand and (get) a soda and a pretzel with mustard. While I was eating and walking, I (notice) some woods in the distance. When I got to the woods, I (decide) to enter the forest. I was a little frightened at first, but then I (see) some squirrels and wild flowers. I (keep) walking and looking around and I (feel) adventurous and happy to be there. I (see) some terrific birds, rabbits, deer, and many different kinds of plants that I had never seen before. It suddenly (occur) to me that if I (walk) any further I (may) get lost or, worse yet, see a bear. So I (decide) to turn around and walk back home, but right in front of me was the thing I (fear) – a bear! All I (can) think of to do was to run, and that is what I (do). I (run) all the way home as fast as my legs could carry me. As soon as I (get) home, I (decide) not to ever go in those woods again.
