Building Projects in Argentina

Argentina is home to many famous buildings. Two important projects are the Obelisco and the Casa Rosada. The Obelisco was built faster and had fewer setbacks than the Casa Rosada. Its construction took only 31 days in 1936. It was a low-budget project, but the design was more modern. The city government managed the project well.

The Casa Rosada is older and had a longer construction period. Built in the 1800s, it combined two earlier buildings. The project had more problems and delays. However, it became the most iconic government building in Argentina. It had a bigger budget and more detailed architecture.

Today, the Casa Rosada is more traditional, while the Obelisco is taller and more symbolic of modern Buenos Aires.
