A Journey

Mr. and Mrs. James Grant and their son, Peter, are going on a journey from New York City in New York State to Salt Lake City in Utah. Some time before the journey Mr. Grant said to Mrs. Grant and Peter, "We will go by plane. A plane journey to Salt Lake City takes a very short time."

Peter said to his father, "There are horses and cows and sheep and pigs between here and Utah, aren't there? Do you see them from a plane?"

"No," said his father, "the plane goes very high in the air."

Mrs. Grant said, "Going by bus  or train, you see all the states between New York and Utah and houses and men and women and boys and girls and animals."

"Mother goes on a bus," said Peter, "when she goes to the store."

"But that is a short journey," his father said. "This will be a long one."

"We took a train when we went to Washington, D.C.," said Peter. "When we were there, you took a picture of me and mother in front of the White House, and a dog came and got in the picture with us."

"'Mother and me,' not 'me and mother,' Peter," said his father.

"Yes, you did make a long journey by train when you were five," Mrs. Grant said. "And now is the time for another. My sister and her family are in Chicago. They are in a new house and have a new baby. We will go and see them. Then we will go to Salt Lake City."

"All right," Mr. Grant said. "We will make our journey in two parts. We will take a plane to Chicago and see your sister's family. Then we will take the bus which goes from there to Salt Lake City."

"Oh good!" said Peter. "We will go by plane and by bus!"
