The villagers learned to appreciate all living things, and the mythical thorny bush became a symbol of their healthy, welcoming community.
Flora explained how the thorny plant protected itself and helped keep pests away, changing Mr. Reed's doubts into respect.
Flora, a bashful and faithful girl betrothed to Leaf, found a smooth parchment with strange gibberish writing and a drawing of a mythical thorny plant under an old archway.
Despite Mrs. Green's cheerless warnings and the villagers' backlash, Flora and Leaf decided to plant the seed near the village entrance.
The seed grew into a thorny bush with sweet-smelling flowers and anchovy-sized fruits that only clever birds could eat safely.
