

The Riachuelo

The Riachuelo is a small river in Argentina. It is in the south of Buenos Aires city. The river is next to the famous neighborhood “La Boca”. Many people visit La Boca to see the colorful houses, the bridge, and the street art.

On the boundaries of the Riachuelo, there are many factories and houses.

The Riachuelo is highly contaminated because the factories throw waste and rubbish into the water. The river is filthy. This pollution is bad for the people who live next to the river. The air is not clean, and many people have health problems like skin allergies, breathing problems, and stomach illnesses because of the dirty water and air.

The government and the city are working to clean the river and the areas around it. It is important to help the families who live there and protect the environment.

The Riachuelo is a famous place in Buenos Aires, but it needs care and attention.
