

Australia Plans To Kill 2 Million Cats

The Australian government plans to kill 2 million feral cats by the year . The purpose is to protect some of Australia's threatened species. The announcement did not sit well with animal rights activists, including Brigitte Bardot. The former French model condemned the Australian and called their plan "animal genocide". Bardot argued that killing cats is cruel and violent. She also argued that the program would be , since cats will continue to breed. Bardot and many other activists feel that the Australian government should spend their money on sterilization eradication.