 Mary: I sometimes think life is not fair. Or maybe I don't know what is fair and what is not. Do you feel the same too?

 Chris: Yeah, I think about sometimes. Fairness is when everyone gets treated equally and has the same chance, right?

 Mary: That's right! But what about situations where some people need more help?

 Chris: Hmm, I'm not sure. Can you give an example?

 Mary: Sure! Let's say we're playing a game, and one of our friends has a broken leg. It wouldn't be fair to make them run as fast as everyone else, right?

 Chris: Oh, I get it now. , so they can have an equal chance.

 Mary: Exactly! That's called "Fairness with a difference" or "equality". It's like making sure everyone has what they need to be on the same level playing field.

 Chris: But how do we decide what's fair? Sometimes it can be confusing.

 Mary: You're right, it can be tricky. One way to decide is by talking about it and listening to each other. We can discuss what feels faue and try to find a solution that everyone agrees with.

 Chris: That sounds fair. So, fairness is also about talking, listening, and finding a solution together?

 Mary: Yes, exactly! It's important to hear different ideas and perspectives because what's fair for one person might not be fair for another.

 Chris: I'm going to try best to be fair from now on. It sounds really important.

 Mary: That's awesome! Let's both make an effort to be fair and encourage others to do the same. Together, we can make our school and community a fair and happy place for everyone!

 Chris: I'm with you on that! Let's spread fairness everywhere we go!

 Chris: I think I understand now. Fairness is like a team effort, where we work together to make sure everyone is treated equally and has what they need.

 Mary: That's a great way to put it! when we practice fairness, we create a positive and inclusive environment where everyone feels valued and respected.
