

Paragraph 4

Robots are also used to help teachers with simple jobs. For example, in some schools in the United States, robots and computer programs are used to check student tests and homework. This can save a lot of time. According to one report, teachers spend more than 11 hours every week just checking assignments and writing reports. If robots help with these jobs, teachers can spend more time teaching and helping students in the classroom.