A. Read the story and choose the correct answer.

Do you believe in ghosts? by Mary Denman

Do ghosts really exist? There are lots of people who say that they do; and I am one of them. Many of Britain's ancient castles have ghosts. One of the most famous "haunted castles" in England is actually the Tower of London.

During the Tower's long history, many men and women were thrown into its dark dungeons, or executed outside its gates! Among the most famous was Lady Jane Grey, Queen of England in the year 1554.

Jane was just 17 when she became Queen, on July 9th 1554; however, at the same time another woman, Mary, thought that she ought to be Queen. Mary's supporters were stronger than Jane's, and within days Jane was sent to the Tower of London. On 19th July poor Jane had her head cut off outside the Tower!

Since then, it is said that the ghost of Lady Jane Grey wanders through the rooms and corridors of the Tower of London.

Other ghosts are not so famous. The village of Prestbury, in Gloucestershire, is reputed to be one of the most haunted villages in England.

Many villagers have heard - and some say they have seen - the "headless horseman" who rides through the village on December 31st! People say that he was a soldier who fought in the English Civil War, in the 17th century.

In the same village, in an old cottage, there is a ghost known as the "spinette player". Sometimes at night, people hear the sound of someone playing this old musical instrument. The music always comes from a room that is empty.

These are just some of Britain's well-known ghosts; but there are lots of less-known ghosts too. I know; I have encountered one of them.

Urban Problems

In the heart of the noisy city, where skyscrapers appear over narrow streets full of traffic, lies a community with urban problems. Among them is Mrs. Garcia, a longtime resident of an old building now overshadowed by condominiums. She sits by her window, watching the world outside transform rapidly.

Graffiti ruins the walls of once-proud buildings, a testament to the rising tensions between the established community and the new, affluent arrivals. Mrs. Garcia remembers a time when her neighbors knew each other by name, gathering in the courtyard for evening conversations. Now, they pass each other like strangers in a foreign land.

The city's infrastructure leaks under the weight of its growing population. Water shortages plague neighborhoods in summer months, exacerbating tensions between residents and city officials. The outdated sewage system struggles to cope with heavy rains, causing periodic flooding that damages homes and businesses alike.

Crime is another shadow that appears over the city streets. Mrs. Garcia remembers a recent incident when a young couple was attacked just outside her building. Police presence has decreased in recent years, leaving residents feeling vulnerable and abandoned.

Among these challenges, community leaders struggle to bridge the divide. They organize neighborhood watch programs and suggest better city services. Yet, the solutions seem perishable against the background of rapid economic disparity.

7. Graffiti is absent from the city walls in the story.
